Help your teen practice smart money decisions before the stakes get real.

The Problem

Imagine your child getting their first debit card, overdrafting their account, forgetting to pay a bill on time, or spending their entire paycheck without saving.

Most young people are expected to manage money before they have ever had the opportunity to practice.

30 states have mandated standalone personal-finance courses—11 already in effect and 19 being phased in by 2031.

Voices from the Research

Quotes from parents and students in the Needs Identification study — validating demand, trust, and the case for consequence-free practice.

PARENT · INTEREST & BUY-IN

"He has to want to play it. But I have to trust it. Both have to be true."

PARENT · EDUCATIONAL TRUST

"You can be the smartest person in the room and still end up broke if no one taught you this part."

PARENT · CONSEQUENCE-FREE PRACTICE

"If an app let him invest virtual money in something volatile and then feel what a crash is like, safely — that might teach him more than anything I could say."

STUDENT · REAL-WORLD PREPARATION

"At sixteen, money advice from a parent tends to come across as nagging. The same message might actually be heard if it comes from a neutral app or coach."

PARENT · SOCIAL & RETENTION DYNAMICS

"If it's just him and his mom thinks it's good — that's the kiss of death. If his friends are on it, competing, that's what keeps him coming back."
